

The search for narrow exotic resonances decaying in $\Xi \pi$ at a mass of 1862 MeV has been performed with the COMPASS detector at CERN. The study follows the observation of an exotic baryonic state decaying in $\Xi^+ \pi^-$ interpreted as a pentaquark. The results of the analysis from 2002 and 2003 COMPASS data are presented.